

Birth Announcement: 32 Banggai Cardinalfish

The History of Diving Museum is proud to announce the hatch of 32 Banggai Cardinalfish 'fry' in our saltwater aquarium. The 6mm fry look like miniature adults and began feeding on newly hatched brine shrimp immediately.

They are in a nursery tank off site where they can be observed and fed several times a day. The youngsters stay together in a school. Of the 32 fry released, 5 were deformed and did not survive.

The male Banggai Cardinal-fish incubates the eggs in his mouth for about 3 weeks until they hatch. Then in an even rarer strategy for marine fish, he allows the fry to seek the safety of his mouth for another week. Incredibly, he does not eat at all during this month long period.
