Dear Anny Bannanny

Dear Anny Bannanny,

My father is in his late 80s. When my stepmother passed away, an alcoholic woman in her 50s moved in with my dad. The first thing she attacked was the liquor supply, next she got a hold of his credit cards which I had to cancel. Now she wants him to get a reverse mortgage on his home so she can get her hands on that money too. She feeds him a pack of lies and says that his family doesn't love him and that "we want to put him in a nursing home." Mean while she is scheming to get his money. All my dad has left is his social security and his home.

Even worse, this is not the first time she has taken advantage of an elderly person either. My dad thinks she is helping him but all she is doing is drinking all his money til she is red in the face. When I go to visit him she rears up her ugly head and screams at me to get out of "her" house! We just want what is best for our father. What can we do? Signed,

Daddy's Girl

Dear Daddy's Girl,

Anny Bannanny thinks she knows the person you speak of! I can see clearly that you and your family want her to get out and she won't go. Where else could she go? It would be hard for her to get a job and she'd have to pay rent someplace else. So it looks like you have your hands full. Since you are an intelligent person you know you have to go by the book. Call the authorities, every damn one of them! Tell all Dad's friends to drop in unexpectedly at all hours to check on his well being. If you wouldn't leave a child with an alcoholic why would you leave an elderly person with one? He may be being neglected and it sounds like he's definitely being financially exploited!

The first agency to respond to a report of elderly abuse, in most states, is Adult Protective Services (APS). Every state has at least one elder abuse hotline or helpline. Information and referrals are available from the national Eldercare Locator at 1-800-677-1116. In the meantime watch for signs that might indicate elder abuse. Take a look at your Dad's prescriptions. Does the amount in the bottle jive with the date of the prescription? And keep your eye out for evidence of financial abuse. Ask him if you may scan bank accounts and credit card statements for unauthorized transactions. Call and visit as often as you can.

Best of luck,
Anny Bannanny
